

Petty Survey (Census) of Ireland, 1659, Pender Publication
Scottish Families: Part II

Reminders: only the notables had first and last names written in this survey. English and Scots were enumerated together unless listed under something like “principall Scotch and Irish names” and “Irish” referred to lesser persons, usually tenants who spoke either a lowland Scots dialect or Irish Gaelic but in either case was incomprehensible to the census takers who simply called anyone incomprehensible “Irish.” Also the use of numbers varies: it appears that numbers next to the notables, usually proprietors of larger pieces of lands, refers to the number of persons in that person’s household, but numbers, next to family surnames listed as generally in baronies or parishes, seem to be numbers of families with that surname.
